Colonel Hawkins says he purchased this tract of land several years ago for $5,000, but when he struck its lead of copper, silver and gold, values shot up until they reached a high figure. The Imperial Copper Mining company has an office here, but complainant charges that the concern was never regularly incorporated. About the time mineral was found Colonel Hawkins met Lewis in the west. Lewis examined the property, returned to Chicago and reported to the owner that he had formed a company to purchase the claims, with a capital of $1,000,000. Complainant says he afterward found this representation to be false. Colonel Hawkins was induced to make a conveyance of his interest in the claims, he states, on an agreement that he should hold half the stock in the new company.

COMING BONANZA REGION. Ben R. Heywood Talks on the Future of La Sal.

Discussing the future of the La Sal and Blue Mountain sections of south-Discussing the future of the La Sai and Biue Mountain sections of southeastern Utah yesterday, Ben R. Heywood, the well known cattleman and mine owner, stated that if they were anywhere like as close to Salt Lake as is Tintle, Bingham, Mercur or any of the near-by camps, it would be no time at all till the greatest kind of excitement would prevail. Mr. Heywood has traveled over the sections named for years and is as well posted, probably, on the possibilities of the districts as any man in the state. Nowhere in Utah, he says, can such surface indications of mineral wealth be found, and he predicted that since the pushing and progressive element among the Colorado mining fraternity was beginning to make its presence felt, it would not be long till a stir was made, anyhow. The rugged nature of the country and its remoteness from rail-road transportation had kept men of means from investigating and risking their dollars in prospecting, but last year's work by Coloradoans had done much to awaken interest, and this year, he felt satisfied, would develop rapid headway in bringing the country to the front.

That gentleman's name had given weight to the story told last month, swever, and he knew from his own avels through the Blue mountains of in Juan country that strong evidences an earlier civilization were abundat. ### BIG SUMS FOR ASPHALTUM.

A. E. Hyde Says St. Louis Company

Has Expended Over $20,000. A. E. Hyde, manager for the Utah Asphalt & Varnish company, which phaitum deposits in the Ashley valley, has returned from a ten days' trip to the company's property, where he has been looking after the performance of the annual assessment work, which, he says, is now nearly finished up.

Of the recent reported performances along the line of the gilsonite veins on White river he says that he learned in Ashley that the Gilson Asphalt company of St. Louis has bought up a large number of claims recently and that big sums of money have been spent in securing them. He knew personally that purchases involving more than $20,000 had recently been made by the company named, and he understood also that a large number of claims had been "jumped," or relocated, since the first of the year. He looks for lively times out there during the next year or so. The section where all the excitement exists is twenty-five miles east of Ashley. phaitum deposits in the Ashley valley,

Land Jumping. C. O. Baxter, president and manager c. O. Baxter, president and manager of the Gilson Asphalt company of St. Louis, returned from the coast yesterday and will leave again tonight for St. Louis. Advised of the stories which have been chasing each other out of the reservation country during the few days he has been in California, and asked whether he did not feel somewhat alarmed over the reported wholesale jumping of his company's claims, he replied: "Not in the least. I expected it. But claims that have been jumped will be jumped again."

He said he did not intend to go near his company's mines now, as business required that he should go right on to St. Louis. He looked in no way annoyed at the lively scramble now apparently going on, and seemed perfectly confident that his company would not suffer at all in the skirmish.

Speaking of his resignation yesterday, Manager T. R. Jones said he understood that Mr. Austin was leaving his company to accept a better position. He was a good and capable man and he was glad to hear that he had found a better position than he held here. He had no idea in the world, he said, who would succeed Mr. Austin.
